4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. 4 pages of materialBy Scott RobertsIt's hard to be less pleased with a purchase, but it's a remarkable example. I discovered the claimed 48 pages were published on 4 pages on "The American Economic Review" in 1947. They claim 48 pages by the following "interesting" techniques: Page 1 of text starts on page 11 because they exactly counted the title page, the copyright page, and 2 pages of advertising. At the end are 22 blank "notes" pages. The pages that have text on them average 3.5 sentences. The publishing company is very small, "BN Publishing", not related to Barnes and Noble.

A brief overview of money's historical relationship to the commodities of gold and silver, including the author's prophetic view of a new stage in monetary technique wherein monetary status and pure commodity value may be reciprocally beneficial and ultimately advantageous to the economy at large.
