Marc Allum : The Antiques Magpie before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Antiques Magpie:

From the mythical artefacts of the ancient world to prized 80s pop memorabilia - and the dedicated collectors who revere these objects - 'The Antiques Magpie' brings together a treasure trove of stories, anecdotes and facts from the wonderful world of antiques. It divulges closely-guarded insider tips on how to discover fakes and forgeries; explains how boom and bust can have a devastating impact on the antiques market, and why a Chinese five-clawed dragon, rather than four, can make a porcelain vase worth millions.

'A delightful nest of insights from a professional who knows the game and can weave it into words.' -- Philip Mould
'An amusing romp through some of the most coveted antiques. Full of facts and surprising anecdotes, it's a compelling read that should raise a smile from both the enthusiastic amateur and the seasoned collector.' * House Garden * 'Not only a very useful overall guide for collectors ... and a source of unlikely information, but a laugh a page. A perfect present for virtually everyone.' * Country Life * 'The perfect gift for all collectors' * Choice Magazine *About the Author Marc Allum is a freelance art and antiques writer and consultant based in Wiltshire. Marc has been a miscellaneous specialist on the BBC's Antiques Roadshow programme since 1998.
